

OPTI-West Research & Faculty Development E-Bulletin

Volume 6, Issue 1

January 18, 2012

Online Research Training for busy Practitioners

The National Association of Community Health Centers partnered with the Clinical and Translational Science Institute of Children's National (a CTSA collaboration between Children's National Medical Center and George Washington University) and the Clinical Directors Network to create a one-stop-shopping online resources of research training tools for communities and academics. We seek to link to other resources out there and appreciate advise on what else we should include. The website is currently being upgraded with some new themes/resources (including community developed templates/protocols) and interactive features, and we'll start our big dissemination push in March. However, we think you'll find it enormously useful as is. Here is our soft-launch website: www.CDNetwork.org/NACHC .

Also, stay tuned for the results of NACHC's first survey of health centers and research engagement. For more info, see www.nachc.com/research under highlights.

Please email research@nachc.com for any health center research-related questions.